Teacher Questionnaire

Recent research into classroom discipline has shown that in Australia approximately 65% of students say that their teachers "yell at them in anger" at least "Some of the time". Yelling in anger is one of a number of disciplinary techniques that could be considered a little confrontational. This study aims at finding out how often you might use such techniques and why you use them.

A. Please indicate how often you use the following with your most difficult students.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

Please circle to indicate what year levels your most difficult students are in.

Year: prep/1 2 3 4 5 6

Year: 7 8 9 10 11 12

B. If you ever use such techniques, please describe which ones and why you do them.
C. Background Information

Please Circle

1. Sex: Male     Female

2. Years of teaching experience: _______ Years

3. Partner Status:

D. To what extent do the following reasons accurately describe your feelings about using such techniques?

A=Agree

E. Research shows that many teachers are less likely to speak with students who are more difficult and are less likely to recognise such students when they act responsibly in class.

1. Please indicate if you are more or less likely to make time to discuss more difficult students’ behaviour with them - so they can talk about their side of things until they are clearly understood, and they can figure out a better way to behave in future.

Please circle the appropriate letters below.

   LL = Less Likely to do this with more difficult students
   ML = More Likely to do this with more difficult students
   ND = No Difference.

The reason is……………………………

As stated above, research also shows that many teachers are less likely to recognise and reward more difficult students when they behave normally and stop misbehaving.

2. Please indicate if you are more or less likely to recognise and reward more difficult students when they behave normally and stop misbehaving.

Please circle the appropriate letters below.

   LL = Less Likely to do this with more difficult students

F. If you are using any confrontational disciplinary techniques, like those above, and would like to reduce your use of them, what sort of assistance or support do you think would be of use from colleagues and administration personnel at school. Please write below the sort of support that you would find helpful.

G. Please indicate how helpful you think you would find each of the following kinds of support.
