

Student access to software resources

The findings from the 2013 International Computer and Information Literacy Study (ICILS) offer interesting insights. The percentages of Grade 8 (or equivalent) students at schools with access to software resources that can be used for teaching and learning are shown below.

