

Students' awareness of global issues

The latest edition of Snapshots, from the Australian Council for Educational Research (ACER), digs into PISA 2018 data to explore the question: How aware of global issues are Australian 15-year-olds? Students were asked to report the extent to which they knew about seven issues. Here are some of the results.

Proportion of students who could at least explain the issue generally, by topic

Proportion of Australian students who could at least explain the issue generally, by sex
