

How valued do teachers feel by society?

A recent study analysed TALIS (Teaching and Learning International Survey) 2018 data to examine teachers’ perception of occupational value in 28 OECD countries. The findings show an overwhelming majority feel undervalued in almost all countries. Here, we look at teachers’ perception of their overall occupational value, and drill down into 4 specific aspects.

Teachers' overall perception of their occupational value (top 5 countries)

Measured by calculating the mean of 4 aspects of occupational value (feeling valued by society, the media, policymakers, and influence on education policy).

Percentage of teachers who agreed or strongly agreed with 4 aspects of occupational value (top 10 countries)
